WATER SHORT; POWER SLACK

Southeastern Vermont Feels Effect of Winter Drouth

FARMERS ALSO HANDICAPPED

Big Power Companies Are Calling Upon Their Reserve Water

Brattleboro, Dec. 26.—Because there was little rainfall last autumn before the ground froze there is now a serious shortage of water for the development of electrical power at the hydroelectric plants in southeastern Vermont, as well as a shortage on the farms for the use of stock. The warm weather the past few days has made no noticeable difference at the Vermont plant of the Connecticut River Power Co. on the Connecticut River or the electric stations of the New England Power Co. on the Deerfield river, and it is said at those plants that no relief is anticipated until the January thaw.

Not in several years has the water in the Connecticut been as low as now. At the power plant in Vermont there are 10 electrical units, two of 5,000 horsepower each and eight of 3,000 horsepower each. The company could market full capacity night and day if it had water to develop that much power, but under present conditions it is able to run only seven units during the day and only three at night. In the daytime the two 5,000-horsepower units are used, but at night all but the large units and five small units are shut down in order that the reservoir may fill.

To help out in the emergency the company's auxiliary steam plants are being used, and power is being furnished by other concerns which have steam plants, under a reciprocal arrangement.

The New England Power Co. is drawing on its big reservoir in Somerset at the headwaters of the Deerfield river, 100 cubic feet of water per second, day and night, for five or six days a week. There have been times when the Somerset reservoir was lower than now, but not for several years.

Cold weather has interfered somewhat with the work on the new big earth dam which the New England Power Co. is building on the Deerfield at Whitingham. The organization there, embracing four different concerns, has been reduced to between 400 and 500 men, whereas it has been as high as nearly 700 men. The work of building the core of the dam cannot be carried on when the temperature is below freezing.

At the West Dummerston power plant of the Twin State Gas & Electric Co. of Brattleboro, which has a capacity of about 750 horsepower, only about one-third of the capacity is being developed. The company uses around 1,300 horsepower, and what it does not develop at its own plant is obtained from the plant of the Connecticut River Power Co. at Vernon. The West Dummerston plant is located on the West river, which is the lowest it has been in years.

POPULATION OF CITY OF MONTREAL IS 700,000

The Figures Have Been Collected By Civic Authorities.

A wide divergence between the federal census of 1921 and the city's computations is shown in a report submitted to Dr. S. Boucher, director of public health, by Dr. M. O'Brien Ward, chief of the civic vital statistics department. The work of the civic statisticians, therefore, states, has been made very difficult of late, largely because of the long lapse of time between decennial census takings and the remedy suggested is at least a census every five years, says the Montreal Star.

Following through the comparison between the Dominion and city's census, the report shows that the former gave 609,533 as Montreal's population in 1921, while the city figures were 700,000 or 91,467 more. Likewise, the proportions of French-speaking and English-speaking citizens were far from being in agreement. For instance, the federal figures gave English-speaking citizens as 139,962, while the civic report showed 160,000. In the same manner, the French-speaking citizens totalled 377,300, according to the Dominion census, while the city figures showed 434,000.

Continuing, Dr. Ward says, "the federal census did not give satisfaction to a great part of the population as the idea persists in many sections of the country that the totals were much lower than was actually the case. In the case of Montreal, protests were registered by the mayor and council, the board of trade and chambers de commerce, and a large number of commercial and industrial establishments."

In the 1911 census, however, the difference between the civic and federal census was not so apparent, there being only 480 of a balance.

Dr. Boucher adds to the report the comment that, in view of the shifting nature of a large proportion of city population, the city authorities should take a census every five years.

Premature Fishing.

A man had been fishing patiently by the side of a large pond for an hour, and his effort had been watched by a villager.

"I say," said the fisherman at last, "do you know if there are any fish in this pond?"

"Well," said the villager, "if there are they must be very small, for before the heavy storm came yesterday there weren't no water in that there pond."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about 50 cents. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the sore throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better. The money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Out of the Mouths of Babies.

Mother was just about to leave the house when little Lillian entered the room. For a moment she stood perfectly still, gazing at her mother. When finally she did speak, it was to say:

"Mamma, do you know what I am going to give you for Christmas when it comes again?"

"No," said her mother smilingly; "but I should like to."

"Why, a fine dressing-table tray with flowers painted on it," said the child.

"But Lillian," was the reply "you know I have a nice tray of that sort already."

"No, you haven't, mother," said Lillian. "I've just dropped it on the floor."—From Everybody's Magazine for January.

Paris, Dec. 26 (By the Associated Press).—The condition of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt showed further improvement this morning and her physicians said that they tentatively considered her out of danger.

They asserted that if the actress' remarkable recovery continued there was a possibility that she might still appear in the new Guitry play as planned. Mme. Bernhardt was taken with fainting spells during a dress rehearsal of the play several days ago and suffered a relapse on Sunday.

PARIS NEWS BRIEFS.

American Archeologists Offer to Guarantee Carthage Excavation.

Paris, Dec. 26.—American archeologists have offered a guarantee of $25,000 a year for four years towards the expense of excavations in the ruins of Carthage says the Matin, but according to the Savant Ernest Babelon, the government has decided not to accept the offer because of the official red tape involved.

Paris, Dec. 26.—One of the questions attendant upon possible action in the Rhineland is that of the money supply, says the Matin. The experts are at a loss to decide, whether in the event that the Ruhr Basin is separated from the rest of Germany by a customs barrier, it will continue to receive paper from Berlin. It is admitted that the introduction of foreign money into France would raise serious difficulties. Deliberations on this subject are continuing, the newspaper adds.

When about to cut a pie with a meringue, dip the blade of the knife in hot water and the meringue will not tear.

Marshmallow fudge: Three cups light brown sugar and one-half cup milk. Boil till it forms a soft ball. Remove from the fire and beat until it thickens a little, then stir in one-half pound of marshmallows cut into quarters. Pour into buttered pan.

To prolong the life of window cords they should be dusted and rubbed with a well-greased rag. The snapping of the cords is caused by friction, and they are further weakened by sun and weather. The greasing makes them pliable and prolongs their usefulness.

Corn Flake Wafers.

Three cups flour, two tablespoons butter, six tablespoons sugar, one-third cup Sunmaid raisins, one egg, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half cup milk. Beat the sugar and butter to a cream. Add egg, then milk and flour sifted with baking powder. Mix the raisins in before all the flour is added. Make a soft dough. Roll out and cut like biscuits. Bake in a quick oven.

Should a Child Have a Regular Allowance?

Angelo Patri, the famous educator, says in the January Delinquent: "Of course, it will not do to give children money and allow them to use it without the oversight of some older person. When a child is given his first allowance, he should be given an account-book and taught how to use it. Then father or mother, or whoever is in charge, should go over the account every week end—not in order that the child may be brought to task for his spending, but that he may be helped to a wiser spending. Point out where he spent too much and where he might have spent more. Sometimes saving money proves just as wasteful in the long run as spending it.

"He will make mistakes. That is his teacher's opportunity. He gave too much for this cause, he was short on that one; he spent all he had for a fishline—then he had no money for books. He will learn under direction to budget his allowance and live within it."

"When he spends wisely, praise him and extend the field of his buying. Teach him to lay aside a little to go into the big bank each month. When he does this out of his own money, double his saving for him. Teach him that his responsibilities and powers will increase his judgment and common sense. Then he will be able to handle his own expenses and make few mistakes. Yes, I think every child should have an allowance."

EDMONTON LARGE RAW FUR CENTER

The Release of Skins from Russia Might Affect the Prices.

"Edmonton is unquestionably the largest center for raw furs direct from the trapper, on the North American continent," says Col. J. K. Cornwall, veteran trader and fur buyer of the city. Col. Cornwall has just arrived home from a visit to Montreal and Winnipeg, where he attended the fur auctions, also from other large centers in the eastern states, says an Edmonton special to the Montreal Star.

"As Canada produces practically all the furs taken on the continent," he says, "the logical place to sell that fur is in the Dominion. The fur sales held at Montreal and Winnipeg can be made more successful if Canadians patronized them more extensively. Further I can see no reason why similar sales should not be conducted in Edmonton, for it is the largest center near the actual fur producing country. Were these sales held in this city, they would benefit the trappers, the traders, the city merchant and everyone else and it is about time a concerted move was made in this direction."

Col. Cornwall found that the fur market was now in a healthy condition, "speculators" being eliminated and manufacturers buying at the market to meet their requirements. Instead of trying to corner the output.

From what he learned in the east, Col. Cornwall says that much fur is being held in Europe. Due to financial conditions on the other side of the water, it is unlikely that Europeans will spend much money on furs this winter and there is a possibility that the stocks held there might be dumped on the American market as there are no trade walls against raw furs. Another factor, which might affect the price, would be the releasing of raw furs now held in Russia.

Superfluity No Great Blessing.

"I know a woman who is a college graduate, a woman of rare personal gifts, of intelligent keenness of mind, a woman of wealth and refinement, who has a beautiful home in a beautiful surrounding, with everything that might seem to insure happiness and tranquility.

But I heard her say, the other day: 'I am just worried to death over my housekeeping. I cannot keep a maid more than a month. I have the hardest time getting new furniture for our new addition to the home. It is provoking after having spent weeks over the study of wall paper, to have the wrong shade sent out by the firm that is doing the decorating. You cannot imagine what a time I am having. It is too provoking.'

This woman is cursed with what Jesus called the "superfluity" of things. What the master really said when he uttered that significant statement about things, was this: 'A man's life does not consist in the "superfluity" of the things that he possesses.'

That is, Jesus did not condemn things in themselves. If we are going to be civilized, and live in a house and not a tepee; if we are going to be human and not savage, we must pay the price and have things in our lives. But not "too many" things. And that is the matter with this woman and many more like her. Their houses are full of pictures and furniture and rugs and dishes and rooms that must be dusted and cleaned and taken care of, until in many cases the things become a curse and the home-keeper is a slave to the things that have set their hard foot on her neck.

The old Scotch proverb has it, "Ye canna be baith gran' and comfortable." The same thing is expressed in the Master's statement about life not being defined by the "superfluity" of things. And yet how many people do you know, who are cursed with things? Better live in a tepee and own one blanket.—Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, in the Christian Herald.

Swearing No Good.

"Embroucation" is a word used much here, there and in the East. One day a curate said to an old parishioner: "Well, Mr. Huggins, has the nurse been to see you yet?"

"Yes, sir, thank 'ee," was the reply. "She called once an' done my foot more good than all the imprecations I ever used."—Boston Transcript.
